WELL AND CHEERFUL
THE NATION'S BRAIN
BALANCING

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The President yesterday looked unusually cheerful and his health has never been better. Perhaps a balanced budget contributes to his cheerfulness, perhaps the fact that representatives in Congress are anxious to get away and may go home.

THIS is written under the dome of the capitol, which may be called the nation's skull. Beneath it are the two lobes of the law-making brain, the Senate and House, and between them, the supreme court, representing afterthought, ready to correct mistakes.

George Washington laid the cornerstone of the capitol and would like to see it now.

ABOVE the east front of the fine building three star-spangled banners are waving in a warm breeze. Inside, men worn out with long hours of hard discussion are trying to replenish the nation's pocketbook.

Everybody has worried about balancing the budget. Millions are to be cut from salaries of public employees, including thousands that get as little as $25 a week. The angel Gabriel will write down Hiram Johnson's fiery speech in defense of underpaid workers, asked to make good, from life necessities, waste and extravagance for which they are not responsible.

THE NATION'S total debt today is seventeen and a half billions, more than 15 times as much as when the war started.

That sounds serious until you realize that in good times the national income is ninety billions. If you had an income of ninety thousand a year and owed only seventeen thousand five hundred, you would consider yourself solvent.

Why must the government worry so much about the budget when it owes, all told, only one-sixth of one year's income?

MANY Americans complain of Congress, but its ability. That is a mistake. There are brilliant men in both houses, abler than those that criticize without knowing.

THE trouble is that your government is what automobile men call "unassumable job."

IF YOU assembled parts from 48 different automobiles, you would not expect the machine to run well, even with all parts first class individually.

Down hill it would run nicely, even with four wheels of different sizes. But uphill, with the difficulties of a rough road, it would travel poorly.

River Claims Five

ROCKFORD, IND., June 4.—The Ohio river's worst tragedy of the year so far had claimed five lives today. A motorboat carrying four adults and four children capsized near here last night, and only three occupants survived.

Those who drowned were Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Lynn and their 10-year-old son, Charles, and Mrs. Louis Parsley and her five-year-old daughter, Bonnie Jean. All lived at Rockford.

Reed Is Jailed On Liquor Charge

LISBON, June 4.—Victor Reed of East Liverpool, failed to abide by an agreement made with the court to leave the county soon after he was indicted for possession of liquor by the January grand jury, and he was fined $100 and costs by Judge W. F. Lones Friday afternoon on his plea of guilty. When Reed did not leave, he was ordered picked up and has been in the county jail about 160 days. He was sent to jail again in default of fine and costs.

Stanley Sprague of Salem, indicted for burglary, was paroled by the court after entering a plea of guilty. Conditions of his parole are that he show good behavior, abstain from the use of liquor and report to Probation Officer J. H. McCready monthly.

BROWN SILENT ON HIS ORDER TO HOLD VOTES

Asks Impounding of All Ballots Cast In May Primaries

HERBERT, PALMER RACE IS CHECKED

Columbiana Has Not Received Order, But Has Slips Ready

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, June 4.—Strict silence today hid the meaning of an order by Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown impounding all ballots cast in the Ohio primary, May 10.

The order was sent to all county elections boards late yesterday with the admonition that violations would result in "summary dismissal of the offending board."

Various Rumors Heard
Brown's silence as to the purpose of his action gave rise to various rumors, including one that he planned a recount in the Republican gubernatorial contest in which he was defeated by David S. Ingalls of Cleveland.

Reached at his office, however, Brown declined to explain the order, asserting that it "speaks for itself."

"Under the law," he said, "The ballots could be destroyed at midnight, June 9, and we are not ready for them to be destroyed."

This statement was taken by some observers to be an inference that the secretary of state's office had discovered important irregularities in the vote count. It was recalled that Brown and his staff have been checking and recapitulating the precinct vote in each county and meanwhile withholding official announcement of the results of any of the contests.

CURTIS FACES COURT JUNE 27 IN LINDY HOAX

Norfolk Boat Builder Pleads Not Guilty To Indictment

(By Associated Press)
FLEMINGTON, N. J., June 4.—John Hughes Curtis entered a plea of not guilty today to an indictment charging him with hindering capture of the kidnap-murderers of the Lindbergh baby.

Trial was set for June 27 as soon as the plea was entered.

Curtis, who pleaded not guilty despite his own confession to police, entered court dressed in a dark blue suit. He seemed entirely unconcerned and there was a faint smile on his face as he looked directly at the judge. He waived reading of the indictment and was remanded to jail in lieu of bail.

As soon as the brief proceedings were over Curtis was told that he was remanded to jail to await trial. He nodded his head.

"Thank you very much," he said, speaking directly to the judge.

Curtis was in the courtroom less than three minutes. The indictment, reading of which, as a preliminary to his plea, he waived, charged he wilfully gave false information "for the purpose of preventing and hindering" arrest of the kidnapping.

It recited that he perpetrated his hoax of imaginary negotiations for return of the murdered baby "with force and arms". This was under stood, however, to be merely customary legal phraseology and not to indicate any belief that Curtis had actually carried out his hoax by physical force and threats rather than by deceit.

Storm Aids Raiders

OKLAHOMA CITY, June 4.—The policemen were pretty certain there was liquor in the house, but the house was outside the city limits and they couldn't do anything about it.

Just then a storm came up, the waters began rising and the house began floating toward the officers waiting until the house had floated inside the city limits and then found 700 bottles of beer in it.

POLISH FLIER BELIEVED OVER ATLANTIC TODAY

Hausner Monoplane Last Sighted at Sidney, Nova Scotia

WARSAW, POLAND IS PILOT'S GOAL

Weather Conditions Are Reported Good For Ocean Flying

(By Associated Press)
Stanislaus Hausner sailed today the route of high adventure—the airway over the Atlantic from New York to Europe.

Since 5 o'clock last night, eastern standard time, there has been no word of his progress. He had no wireless, and the only possibility of news of him rested in the few ships ploughing the waters over which his huge monoplane charted its course.

Droning Away Across Water

But there was no worry. This afternoon, perhaps, if he is unsighted or unreported there may be occasion for concern. The early part of today, however, presumably finds the Poland-born American droning along, 100 miles an hour, over lone-sea seas.

At 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon his monoplane was reported seen over Halifax. Two hours later the plane was observed over Sidney, Nova Scotia. This indicated Hausner followed the coastline until he reached the tip of Cape Breton, at which point he is believed to have pointed the nose of his orange-painted plane over the Atlantic.

His destination was Warsaw, Poland. In the event his 525 gallons of gasoline proved insufficient for that 4,375 mile hop, Hausner planned to descend either at London, England, or Paris, France. Should his fuel appear adequate at these cities he planned to circle the fields—Croydon and Le Bourget—and drop packets of letters.

Weather Is Favorable

Weather conditions across the Atlantic were favorable when he took off at 8:56 a. m. Eastern standard time, Friday.

Hausner figured to reach the British Isles in something less than 30 hours. Paris is two hours beyond London and Warsaw is another eight hours. He hoped to make the entire journey in 44 hours' flying time.

Mrs. Anna Freed, 80, Dies Near Leetonia

Mrs. Anna Freed, 80, widow of Jefferson Freed, died suddenly about 9:30 p. m. Friday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. David Baker, south of Leetonia. Following her marriage to Jefferson Freed they lived on a farm south of Leetonia, making their home on the same farm for more than half a century. She was well known in the Leetonia district. She was a member of St. Paul's Lutheran church, Leetonia.

Surviving are three daughters, Mrs. Baker and Mrs. Charles Templin, who lived near their parental home, and Mrs. Ella Switzer of Salem, and two sisters, Mrs. Belle Hill, Leetonia, R. D., and Mrs. Nettie Lyons, of Columbiana. Mr. Freed died Feb. 16, last.

Funeral service will be held at 1:30 p. m. Monday at the Arbaugh Funeral home, East State st. Interment will be in Grandview cemetery.

Friends may call at the home of Mrs. Switzer, 412 West State st., any time.

They'll Battle Depression Anew

A world conference to wage war on the depression by the international stabilization of commodity prices is the latest proposal for putting business in both hemispheres back on its feet. The plan, initiated by Winston Churchill, British statesman, and backed by Premier Ramsay MacDonald, has been assured of the cooperation of the United States, it was announced, following a conference between Secretary of State Stimson and President Hoover. It is expected that currency, foreign exchange, the gold standard, silver and other questions will be dealt with, but the United States has barred debts, reparations and disarmament from discussion.

Boy's Condition Is Improved Today

The condition of William Borrelli, seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Borrelli, West Second st., injured in an accident here Thursday night, was reported slightly improved by Central Clinic physicians today.

First reported by persons in the vicinity of the accident scene to have fallen from a bus on which he jumped, the boy today was said by his father to have been struck by the vehicle as he was walking near the Stark Electric depot to buy a newspaper.

The father said today that he and Mrs. Borrelli witnessed the accident as they were standing in the yard in the rear of their home.

Borrelli said that William was knocked to the ground as the vehicle was being backed into a driveway adjacent to the Stark depot by the driver, Joseph Scavelli, of Youngstown.

The lad sustained a fractured leg and body bruises. His condition, while improved slightly, was still reported serious.

Another Hole-In-One

LOS ANGELES, June 4.—These hole-in-one stories are getting monotonous. Like, for instance, William Pulisevich, who took his 12-year-old son Bill out to show him how to play golf. At the eighth tee, the father said: "This is a tough one, my boy. Use your spoon."

"Father," replied Bill, "sometimes you irk me." Whereupon he whammed the ball down the fairway with a driver and it dropped into the cup. The father shook his head sadly and said: "I still think you should have used a spoon."

Ex-Service Men withdraw From P. R. R. Tracks; No Disturbance

THREE TRAINS HELD IN YARDS

Railroad Heads Rout Out Governor, But Are Denied Militia

BULLETIN

Delayed by a battalion of bonus marchers seeking transportation to Washington D. C., the Cleveland-Pittsburgh flier, scheduled to arrive in Salem at 9:56 a. m., drew into the city one hour and a half late this morning.

The flier was scheduled out of Cleveland at 8 a. m. but was prevented from leaving the Pennsylvania railroad yard there when ex-service men manned the engine and cars. The train arrived here at 11:25.

BULLETIN

(By Associated Press)
CLEVELAND, O., June 4.—Police and about one hundred bonus marchers clashed in the Pennsylvania railroad yards today when the veterans made a futile attempt to storm the roundhouse to obtain transportation to Washington.

One of the marchers was beaten into unconsciousness and several others fell before a charge of mounted police, swinging riot clubs.

The group of marchers numbered about 100. Part of the main body of about 1,000 men, earlier were quietly moved out of the yards by several hundred police, after blockading the Pennsylvania main line during the night.

CLEVELAND, June 4.—A battalion of bonus marchers who had tied up all freight train movements in the Pennsylvania railroad's yard here capitulated before a massed force of police and withdrew to a nearby field today.

After more than 400 patrolmen, mounted policemen and a motorcycle squad assembled, Chief of Police George Matowitz ordered the ex-service men to leave the yard. They did so without disturbance.

Veterans Surround Engine

A short time previously, an attempt to bring a locomotive into service, with Chief Matowitz among those aboard, failed when the veterans surrounded the engine and draped it with three American flags.

The display of police came a few hours after officials of the Pennsylvania routed Governor George White from bed with a request for state militia, but Adjutant General Frank D. Henderson said local authorities were able to cope with the situation.

The veterans, stalemated in their march to Washington when the railroad refused them transportation last night, promptly took

IS IT RECONSTRUCTION?

Discussions of things that are wrong naturally resolve, in the United States, into outlines of improvement to be made in the future. Americans never have looked backward with any intention of retracing their steps, though plenty of them these days are sitting still and facing in the wrong direction with tears of weakness in their saddened eyes.

Is the vast upheaval of the present reconstruction? Some say it is, some say it is destruction, and both are right. Furthermore, they agree. They only fail to define their terms and stick to them. Those who say it is destruction and back up their claim with evidence from the inexhaustible store that is available have shortened vision. Destruction, they should admit, is inevitable when reconstruction is to become operative on the site of an existing structure.

From the weekly bulletin of Ernst and Ernst, the following paragraph has been taken to represent the view of an organization which is in daily, intimate contact with thousands of business institutions.

Even in these days of grave specific difficulties it should be recognized that the business mechanism generally is in better shape than it was several years ago. Most units are more cleanly organized. There is less waste, less unnecessary activity, less superfluous expense. There is far greater understanding of the hard facts upon which business must be run, and less disposition to smear these facts with vague ideas pulled out of thin air. Mills, factories, stores, and other businesses are more capably run. The machinery which supplies credit and capital has been checked up, some of the faults have been eliminated, and other faults are in process of correction. The progress in these respects must be regarded as highly beneficial in the long pull, and the advance should be noted even while the distress of readjustment is upon us.

By all the hard-headed experience of all the men who have established the solid tradition of good business, this is reconstruction that Americans are experiencing, whether or not they welcome it. It is a tedious, painful dangerous process of getting to rock bottom and building up from there, not the hanging garden of easy money and no work that cluttered the minds of American men who should have known better in the late "new era." The bricks, the stones, the sand, the beams, the wheelbarrows and the tools of the trade are all here, in a terrible mess to be sure, but in the same material proportions as always.

This spring brought with it no magic to make them jump into activity and form, ready for use. There will be no special dispensation this summer or fall to make them become self-operative. Reconstruction isn't a miracle; it's a job. National recognition of the fact, and there are signs that already it is filtering through the labyrinth of falsity with which business has tried to protect itself from reality, is as inevitable as dawn.

THE GIANTS AND MCGRAW

Youngsters who learned to lip McGraw the same day they learned how to say baseball will have a hard time understanding why newspapers announce retirement of the man and the game continues. But things happen that way in a world where men grow old and institutions they help to build live on.

John J. McGraw was a genius in his line of work. He understood men, he understood strategy, he knew business and he knew crowds. He had, moreover, ability to fabricate all he knew into a system that elevated the New York Giants into eminence that will defy time. Perhaps it is improper to use the past tense in referring to the man; he has only retired from active management.

Behind him he leaves a sturdy crop of the colorful tradition which is, when everything is said and done, the substance of the national game. His hand has grasped the hands of dozens of men who have made baseball history. His skill has lifted them out of obscurity into a dazzling place in one of baseball's greatest clubs.

More important than these are the unnumbered thousands who have enjoyed the fine performances made possible by the McGraw system. His retirement is a loss to players, but it is a real blow to fans who have been winning and losing with the Giants for the last three decades. They may not know him personally, they may have only a newspaper acquaintance with the team he managed, but nevertheless he was an irreplaceable part of the game that is the truest expression of this nation's character.

The Stars Say—

For Sunday, June 5
Sunday's horoscope shows the prospect of peculiar, mysterious or intriguing matters to the fore, especially in connection with writings, letters or possibly investigations into the occult, physics of metaphysical. The mind will be well equipped for serious study in these directions, but otherwise be discreet.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year of peculiar situations and developments, with some progress and success if the affairs be shrewdly managed. There may be intrigues of conspiracy, manipulated through writings or unusual contracts or agreements. A child born on this day may have a predisposition to the occult, mysterious, mental, physical or antiquities, and it should excel in writing of these matters.

Notable nativity: Edmond Vance Cooke, writer.

For Monday, June 6

Monday's astrological forecast favors letters, writings, business and also, to a slight degree, advancement or notice in employment, although it is probable that the chief activities may center about the social, domestic, artistic and affectional relations. These affairs may have an element of secrecy or intrigue, and may culminate in courtship or marriage.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a fairly successful and gratifying year in business, writings, intellectual pursuits or in employment, but the main activities may center upon romantic, domestic, artistic or social affiliations, possibly accentuating marriage or courtship, with certain intriguing or unusual aspects. A child born on this day may be versatile, of many talents, and should succeed and be prosperous and happy.

Notable nativity: Nathan Hale, patriot.

HEALTH

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland
New York City

Keep Tonsils Unless They Are Infected.

Infected and enlarged tonsils are injurious to the health. If actually diseased the tonsils should be removed, as they may be responsible for many serious ailments.

DR. COPELAND

Normally the tonsil is about the size and shape of an almond. In tonsillitis, or inflammation of the tonsil, it becomes swollen, enlarged and painful. The throat is very sore, swallowing is difficult and there is high fever. If you have ever suffered from tonsillitis you can appreciate how sick that disease can make you. The attack subsides, but usually recurs unless the tonsils are removed.

Other glandular tissue similar in structure to the tonsil is found in back of the throat. This is the pharyngeal tonsil, and when it becomes diseased and enlarged the child has what we call adenoids. Its breathing is difficult and its hearing may be impaired. This trouble is rarely, if ever, seen in adults, but it is quite common in children.

Usually abnormalities of the tonsils and adenoids are associated, and in case of operation both are removed at the same time.

But I do not believe that tonsils should be removed unless they are infected as well as enlarged. In health these glands help the body ward off disease, while if infected they are a menace to health. Infected tonsils are a possible cause of chronic rheumatism, kidney disease, heart disease and other infections within the body. The dangers associated with disease of the tonsils are great and should not be treated lightly.

Many adults suffer from diseased tonsils who have been advised to have them removed but have neglected to do so. Too little emphasis is placed upon the significance of diseased tonsils in adults and the need of attention.

It is now possible to have tonsils removed without a cutting operation, but by a procedure that is used only for adults. It is not advised for children. This treatment consists of applications of a special electric current to the diseased tonsils, continued until the tonsils are destroyed.

The advantages in this form of treatment are that the patient can continue work without interruption, while the tonsils are removed without shock, pain or danger of hemorrhage. This will appeal to many who have feared operation. Your physician should decide which treatment is best for you; but please remember that diseased tonsils may create a serious condition, and do not neglect them.

NEW YORK, June 4.—Another you broken. And here I am again week-end in the country. They call it "The Mansion." Why the plural? We had more comfortable homes on Back st. But I must work into a connection over this one. They'll be calling me soon to look at the views.

Ah, books on the night table! As I thought. Look: "A History of Androns," "The Art of Clipping Privet Hedge" and "Twenty Years of Weather Tabulations." I have a pulse pumper for the collection. I must send it when I return to town—"Laboratory Forest Facts."

Pretty soon the crickets will begin and touch me off with the ipus-ipes. But one croak of a bull frog will be the overture and I light a shuck for No. 290. They couldn't have an upstanding, God-fearing tree outside my window. No such a break!

They must have weeping willows. All drooping like Camille in the last act. I suppose there's a red robin hiding somewhere and readying up his act for daybreak. Song writers with those bob-bob-bobbin' along lyrics have made a silly of the robin. He has to be out on the lawn every morning flitting his tail and hopping stiff legged, the crazy, I'll take a road runner every time. They know how to keep quiet. A knock at the door. It's Frozen Pan, the butler. "Can I be of service, sir?" I know you, you wall-eyed old snooper.

He wants to unpack my overnight bag and discuss whatyoucalles below stairs. Well, let me tip you off to this, Moose Face. I didn't have that hole in my sock until they walked me all over this Hell's Half Acre. I've other sox at home—three pairs, smarty.

Well I be wanting a tub now or a jittel later? I'll have a bath when I get good and damn ready. And I wish you'd get to hell out of here. You make me fidgety. And don't look askance at that pair of gloves with half fingers. I know its comic but I've worn them at night for years.

I'll bet if the truth were known you wear flannel gowns and a ruffled night cap. But you never let anyone see your wardrobe. Anything else you can do for me? So far as I can see you haven't done a thing except make me jittery. So long. I'll be seeing you again, I'm afraid. Don't be careful about the steps.

As usual, the first down stairs. As I get this layout they have merely collected a lot of secondhand stone carvings, gargoyles, balconies and such and duded-up an old barn. "The Mansions!" I wouldn't trade Grandpa Young's gourd dipper for all this junk—with Aunt Effie's tip pet tossed in.

Lovely of you to ask me. Such a relief from stuffy Manhattan and talk of the depression. Am I riding in the morning? No, thanks, I neglected to bring my togs. But I'll join everybody at the hunt breakfast. (Count on that!) O, do please hurry to your other guests. Don't tarry! She'll find out how I make out at such affairs. In a little while I'll be off in a corner feeling sorry for myself. (How classy this piece gets as it goes along).

Thank goodness, I slid out of bridge and highball drinking. When they get stunk I can sneak to bed. I suppose Old Caribou had a sly chuckle laying out my pajamas. If I like red with green polka dots that's my business. I'm wearing them. Of course, this night table light has to be unscrewed before it will go out and I'll get a shock to remember it by.

Observers Find New Birds
Unexpected Species Appear Near End of Spring Migration in Salem Area

—BY WILLIAM C. BAKER—

Near the end of the spring migration there is often a spurt, when one may see many birds that he is not expecting to see, and the diversion from bird-nesting may even be exasperating. When one is hunting for a nest, and lo, there suddenly appears a belated migrant, one is faced with the horns of a dilemma.

Observations Interesting

Such was my predicament this week. On one day, I saw but a single bird that does not breed in this vicinity; on the next, a dozen, some of which I had not seen earlier. The two days were full of interesting observations.

On the first day, in the southern part of the county, a most surprising bird came under my ken, one which has me puzzled, for I have never read of the like. I was hunting especially for golden-winged warblers, which breed in the vicinity last year, and I suddenly heard the song of one. But the bird was not a golden-wing, nor yet did the song come from the throat of any bird which is given to the art of mimic, but from a bird which, to all appearances, was a blue-winged warbler.

Birds Interbreed

Now, golden-winged and blue-winged warblers interbreed, and there are two types of offspring, known as Brewster's and Lawrence's warblers, with all sorts of intergradations. Usually these hybrids sing the songs of both parents, but the bird which I watched for a half hour sang no song but that which puzzle me are these:

"Is the bird merely an aberrant blue-wing or a hybrid, and if it be a hybrid, is it a Lawrence's or a Brewster's warbler?"

This is just an instance of the questions which come to the naturalist. One of the largest museums in the country has only three specimens of Brewster's and Lawrence's warblers, and so the trained scientists are unable to answer my questions.

On the next day, my rambles led me through my usual haunts—Teegarden hollow and Guilford lake, and the surprises I had led me to believe that I should have a record list, but when I stopped to count the birds I had seen, the number fell just short of 100.

Finds New Species

I had expected to see little of much interest, for the vast majority of transients passed through earlier than they usually do, and I was not in the field until 7:30. I was soon to be surprised for I found two species of transient warblers almost immediately—the Canada and magnolia warblers, both of which, however, nest in Pymatuning swamp, only 60 miles northeast of Salem. And then I suddenly came across a yellow-bellied flycatcher, a bird I had not seen for two years.

But the most surprising things occurred at Guilford lake. I discovered that some of the water had been let out, leaving mud flats at the upper end of the lake. Too bad, I thought, that they had not been present when the shore-birds were migrating, but my thought had scarcely been expressed when a flock of spore-birds, flashing white bellies as they wheeled in the sunlight, came in to the flats. I was maneuvering to a close enough distance to identify them when I suddenly came to the nest of a least bittern. Why could I not have seen that nest at some other moment? I left the rest and raised my glasses. Into my field came a red-backed sandpiper and a pair of sanderling, the latter rare in this vicinity, and a number of semi-palmated plover, which look like nothing as much as miniature killdeer.

Osprey Dives For Fish

I moved into view, and suddenly a pair of mallards and a pair of blue-winged teal left the water before me. As I was watching them, I saw an osprey dive into the water to capture a fish. I had seen no osprey for weeks. The osprey disappeared behind the willows and I turned again to watch the plovers and sandpipers. They left the flat suddenly, and as I followed their flight, I thought I saw the osprey again, but I suddenly noticed that the wings were not shaped correctly, and then I noticed the white head and white tail of a mature bald eagle!

Following it was a younger bird, without the white, and following this bird was a red-winged blackbird, characteristically giving chase. I hoped to see the eagle rob the osprey of its prey, and catch it in mid-air, but the osprey had disappeared.

MURDER of the NIGHT CLUB LADY

THE NEW THATCHER COLT DETECTIVE MYSTERY
BY ANTHONY ABBOT

SYNOPSIS
Following the receipt of a death threat, Lola Carewe, known as "The Night Club Lady," is mysteriously slain in her penthouse apartment at 3 a. m. New Year's. Dr. Hugh Baldwin reports death due to heart failure. The only clue to the murderer is a medical laboratory specimen box outside Lola's window. Police Commissioner Thatcher Colt attaches importance to the young man whose identity Lola had refused to reveal beyond his first name "Basil." At the mention of "Basil," Mrs. Carewe, Lola's mother, becomes hysterical. It is known that Lola quarreled with Guy Everett and Vincent Rowland, a lawyer, over investments. Eunice, the maid, confessed she was employed by Everett to report the goings on in the apartment. The mystery deepens with the finding of the body of Christine Quires, Lola's guest, Christine had been killed before Lola and her body hidden until an opportune moment arrived for the murderer to replace it, soaking wet, in Lola's room. The findings are similar to those in Lola's case except that Christine's neck was bruised after death. Everett, Christine's last escort, claims he left her at the apartment elevator at midnight. New Year's Eve, and he went for a ride on the Motor Parkway, alone, arriving home after 3 a. m. Mrs. Carewe informs Colt that Christine lived with a brother, Edward, in Rochester, and was to receive her inheritance shortly. Lola's room is vacuum cleaned and the dust particles sent to Professor Luckner for analysis. Colt sends to the medical examiner a hypodermic syringe taken from Baldwin's bag and a strap for analysis, also a strand of Christine's hair found near Lola's window. The Commissioner orders Basil's picture telephoned to M. Dupont, head of the Paris Police. It is learned that Edward Quires received a telegram New Year's Eve and left for New York. Paper and ink identical with the death threat material are found under Eunice's mattress. Everett's Motor Parkway alibi is shattered.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO
In the clear light that began to filter through Colt's study, we looked at each other in wonderment. Where were we going? The established fact that Guy Everett had lied, and about such an important matter, did seem significant. But Colt was not ready to discuss the case. Instead he thoughtfully consulted his watch, while he told me that Gavin had phoned; the portrait of Basil was being cabled by telephoto three thousand miles to France.
It was now five o'clock in the morning of the new year's first day.
"Ten o'clock in Paris," the chief reflected aloud. "Monsieur le Prefect must certainly be at his office."
And such is the service which the Bell Telephone company puts at the disposal of all police officials that in five minutes Thatcher Colt and M. Dupont, Prefect of the Parisian Surete, were talking on the telephone—with myself taking notes on an extension.
"Hello—"
"Monsieur Dupont?"
"Mais oui. Qui est la?"
"Thatcher Colt."
"Ah, Monsieur Colt, mon cher ami! Comment allez-vous?"
"C'est la meme petite vie, Monsieur Dupont, et vous?"
"Ah, c'est la meme chose, Monsieur Colt. Can I help you?"
Here the Paris police chief switched suddenly to English out of compliment to his transatlantic confere and much to my relief.
"I am tracing the history of a woman—and a man," explained Colt. "First I want all the facts that you can get about the life in Paris or anywhere else of a woman now living here under the name of Lola Carewe, also known as Rosita Jorga."
"Ah, oui!" And M. Dupont spelled out the names carefully.
"Will you also see if the Roumanian police have a history of a man supposed to be her father—Jorga, for a long time a political exile in London."
"I will do that, too, mon cher ami! Anything else?"
"Much more," chuckled Thatcher Colt and went on to explain how the portrait of a young man, first name Basil, family name unknown, was being forwarded to the Prefect by telephoto. M. Dupont gasped. Such impatient persons, these Americans!

"And what I am most earnestly hoping you will see your way clear to do," pursued Colt warmly, "is to have one of your agents call on one Marcel Grandon, 60, Avenue D'Iena—in the Ettoile district. I assume—show him the telephone portrait and try to get it identified. Perhaps your people may know him—it is barely possible the young man has a police record."
"We will do our best, Mr. Colt!" "Angels could do no more, M. Dupont! A thousand thanks!"
"Pas du tout, Monsieur Colt."
"Au revoir."
"Au revoir."
As he hung up the receiver, Colt cast a roguish grin at Dougherty. "We're getting nearer to something," he said, "with our picture of Basil!"
"Smart as hell and all that," granted Dougherty, "but I still don't see his connection with this case."
"We'll debate that presently," promised Colt. "Meanwhile, Tony, you please now arouse Mr. Vincent Rowland from his innocent slumbers and tell him I would like to speak to him on the telephone?"
In this announcement Dougherty displayed a lively interest.
"I was much surprised, Thatcher," he revealed, "when you put a tail on Rowland. Surely you don't suspect that old chin-whisker of anything serious?"
"Having relighted his pipe, Colt replied:
"I do regard the eminent Mr. Rowland with a somewhat jaundiced eye. Dougherty. Truth is, I was watching him in the Mayfair dining-room last night, just before Lola sent us her note, inviting us into this singular business. He didn't wish Lola to write that note. I watched him trying to dissuade her. I don't know whether I ever told you or not, but in my youth I mastered lip-reading. I can listen to distant conversations by watching mouths. I saw him implore her to have nothing to do with me in this matter. Perhaps he feared having his name mixed up in a police case. Quite reasonably, too. Yet when we went over, he took the credit for inviting us."
"By George!" glowered Dougherty. "That is curious!"
"Mr. Rowland is on the telephone," I announced.
"Forgive me, Mr. Rowland," began Colt urbanely. "I am sorry to break into your sleep. But there are one or two points the police have to clear up. What's that? Oh, there is no doubt about it now—plain, unadorned murder. Yes! Well, it's very kind of you to be ready to help. I want to ask you two questions. Once, when you and I were talking in Miss Carewe's living-room last night, you started to tell me something that sounded significant. You said, 'There is one curious circumstance which, maybe, I shouldn't tell—' Remember that? No, you didn't finish it—Miss Carewe interrupted us."
At the other end of the wire, Vincent Rowland was hemming nervously.
"Can't imagine what that was," he protested. "Let me think."
"I don't want to bring you downtown at this late hour," hinted Thatcher Colt. "But is so important—"
"I remember now—perfectly!" crowed Vincent Rowland. "I don't think it amounts to anything much at all. But for whatever it is worth, here it is. I have repeatedly warned Lola against her association with an actor named Guy Everett. In the first place—I don't think the fellow is altogether sane. In the second place he was foolish enough to take Lola's advice on investments, and he lost his savings—every dollar he had in the world."

"And you couldn't remember what it was you had meant to tell me," chided Colt sarcastically.
"I'm a sleepy and tired old man," fretted Rowland. "Now is there anything else, Mr. Colt?"
There was a moment of silence, before Colt propounded the next question.
"Mr. Rowland—why did you and Lola quarrel before you left the apartment this evening?"
"Quarrel?"
The word was repeated like a squeal.
"Quarrel!" squeaked Vincent Rowland for a second time. "We did not quarrel. We had a few words, yes—anyone who stays around Lola Carewe very long will have words with her. She is—a high-tempered and tempestuous character, Mr. Colt. But we had no quarrel—we went out on a party together!"
"Well, what did you have words about?"
"About Guy Everett—and who else? I told her she was a fool to be advising men in their investments. She has friends in some investment company downtown and sends them customers. I told her it was a dangerous game. I believe the Federal Government is going to send her friends to Atlanta—but I am sure, Lola thinks—thought—they are all right. And I warned her that Guy Everett was a ruined man and might try to strike back. And she told me to mind my own damned business—which I wish I had!"
"What is the name of this company to which she sends her wealthy friends for investment?"
"The Rock-Ribbed Securities Corporation."
"Thanks, Mr. Rowland. I will see you later in the day!"
"Is that so?" groaned Vincent Rowland, as he hung up his receiver.
"That all sounds convincing enough," remarked Colt and Dougherty nodded sagely. He was about to continue when Colt reached for the telephone. This time it was to instruct Flynn about looking up the Rock-Robber Securities Corporation. This conversation finished, the chief sat back silently and lit his pipe.
I knew that the time had come to examine the evidence. But only a brief review was possible in Colt's present mood; there was too much yet to be learned.
"Get out your notebook, Tony," requested the chief, "and take down our discussion during the next five minutes."
"At last we are going to find out just where we are at!" rejoiced Dougherty with an owlish stare of his blue eyes. The District Attorney set down an empty glass, ran a big hand through his red curls and cleared his enormous throat impressively.
"I am inclined to believe, Thatcher, that you are ignoring the obvious in this case—looking for subtleties that do not exist. It is all much simpler than you make out!"
Colt smiled amiably and entreated the District Attorney to state his conclusions.

Bonus Marchers Face Foodless Stay in Capital
WASHINGTON, June 4.—Thousands of veterans on their way to Washington to demand payment of the bonus face a foodless, shelterless stay in the capital.
Only a few dollars and a limited amount of supplies remain of the store gathered by the police department to care for the jobless veterans and Police Superintendent Glassford has announced he will gather no more. The one to two thousand men already here, many of them now sleeping in the open, will soon be out of food at the present rate, even without arrival of the 5,400 reported enroute on freight trains, trucks and afoot.
Presence of the veterans, however, was helping to get signatures on the petition which will compel a vote in the house on the $2,000,000,000 bonus-paying Patman bill. When the house convened this morning 132 of the necessary 145 signatures were on the dotted line and there was not much doubt that the remainder needed would be obtained before adjournment.

Only seventeen and already being hailed as a champion jockey! Young Mills, recently signed by the Wheatley Stables at $10,000 per year for first call on his services, was literally born in the saddle. He started to "boot 'em home" in Colorado, Utah and Nevada two years ago. His biggest day was at Agua Caliente, Mexico, last December, when he rode in seven races, winning five and finishing second in the other two. The bride was crowned in white grace crepe and carried a bouquet of pink roses, larkspur and baby's breath. Miss Kean's gown was of poudre blue net and her flowers, butterfly roses and larkspur.

Derailed Romance

Old Man Law is no aid to Cupid, for he stepped in the other day at Indianapolis and shattered the romance of Miss Florida Bourbeau and her cowboy companion, Harry Elliott. Miss Bourbeau, shown under arrest in the Indiana city, is the twenty-three-year-old daughter of a wealthy manufacturer of Turners Falls, Mass. She was in Texas for her health and with Elliott started home via the freight train route. Unromantic railroad detectives found them and Elliott was started back to Texas while Miss Bourbeau was held until her family sent for her.

Distinctive Hair, Crown of Screen Royalty

Many Movie Stars Owe Much of Their Popularity and Success to Novel Coiffures. Some Started World-Wide Hair Fads.

Her tresses, long called woman's crowning glory, may also be a ladder by means of which she can climb to fame—if she can only hit upon the hue and manner of dressing it that best suits her personality. A review of some of Hollywood's most famous movie queens proves the truth of this assertion. Though the artistry of Greta Garbo is recognized all over the world, it is problematic as to whether any of her millions of fans would regard her as the same Greta, were it not for the characteristic long bob she has made famous. Another star whose hair is her fortune is Jean Harlow, whose platinum tresses proved an outstanding asset in her climb to stardom. The same is true of Clara Bow, the carrot-topped "It" girl, whose flaming thatch became a model for millions of girls all over the world. The girl who wishes a coiffure to lend any desired personality may find a model among screen royalty. For those who desire to appear sophisticated, the coiffure of Joan Crawford could not be improved upon. Though Joan was a box office draw before she experimented with her hair, it was not until she adopted her present long bob with ear bangs that she became the glamorous personality she is today. At the other extreme is the demure type of coiffure, of which Ann Harding's is a shining example. Ann's beautiful blonde hair, simply fastened in a knot on the nape of her neck, enhances her natural air of simplicity and maidenly modesty. So girls, make use of your crowning glory. Who knows, you may have a gold mine on your head.

HOME-MAKING HELPS

By Wanda Barton

The Magic of Chintz

"If you can't buy new furniture, rejuvenate the old chintz or cretonne," advised the decorator to the woman who had a small budget, but who was determined to alter completely her old-fashioned living room.

No piece of furniture is hopeless as long as it is sturdy enough for continued use. It doesn't matter if the shape is outmoded, or the coverings shabby. Cretonne and chintz not only freshen up old furniture as to color, but actually change the contour. That's a matter for the upholsterer, and a skillful one can work wonders.

The Effect of Chintz

That ancient sofa with worn and shiny arms, overscrolled top and puffy feet can be enveloped completely in cretonne or chintz, plain, flowered or glazed, and with piping of smartly contrasting colors, and generous pleating at the bottom transform it into a smart new piece. Those big armchairs that dominate the room depressingly, now that they are a bit shabby, can be given a similar cretonne or chintz treatment. Sofa and chair can be covered with the same fabric, or a smarter effect achieved by using a flowered chintz for one and a plain glazed chintz of the same tint for the other piece.

Ordinary wooden chairs can be equipped with cushioned backs and seats of chintz or cretonne and be used in the living-room or bedroom. For recovering old cushions there's nothing quite so fresh-looking and as the modern cretonnes are washable, they are also eminently practical even for rough use outdoors or on the sun-porch.

A Helpful Booklet

Ready-made covers of chintz and cretonne are now quite moderate in price. But the skillful needlewoman can make her own. The government offers help in an excellent booklet which gives complete information on how to measure, cut and sew chair and couch covers. It can be obtained for five cents from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., and the title is "Slip Covers, Leaflet No. 76, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture."

Designing a Kitchen

"For the first time I'm going to have something to say this year about the arrangement of my kitchen," says Emily gleefully, as she describes a little cottage the family has built for the summer. "All the years we've lived in rented apartments, I've had to adjust myself to whatever inconveniences happened to be built in."

In the cottage Emily has supervised the building of a little kitchen exactly as she wanted it, not theoretical, but developed out of practical, everyday needs she has felt for years. She has laid out space for equipment where it will save steps. The shelves and cupboards for dishes and utensils are around the sink, at left and right, so that there's no walking back and forth at dishwashing time.

For the sake of light and cheerfulness, the preparing table and sink are the objects nearest the window, while the corner with least light holds the refrigerator.

The closet for cleaning tools is a deep, spacious square large enough to hold everything, from vacuum cleaner to whisk broom.

Shelves with a little groove in front, built on the inside of the door, hold cleaning fluids, powders and pastes, while cuphooks under them hold short-handled mops and brushes.

The shelving was built in the ideal way, at heights Emily can reach without standing on a stool or stretching uncomfortably.

The Church Invites You

Jesus Cleanses the Temple

"AND when he had made a scourge of small cords, He drove them all out of the temple." Thus did Jesus at Jerusalem when He came upon those who were merchandising in God's house.

Certainly Jesus found no fault in the sale of doves and oxen, but evidently wanted it to be understood that all such, was out of place in God's temple.

Should we not give serious thought to that incident in the life of Jesus, and make the application accordingly?

Recently the writer spent several hours on a Sunday in a certain hotel lobby. I was much interested in several church programs coming in via radio.

One speaker related deplorable conditions existing in the world, and suggested a Washington or Lincoln to lead us out of distress. Another one, emphasized more tax upon the rich, and less upon the poor. One pointed out that our people lacked faith in government, while still another, said that monetary system was much to blame. Meantime, I heard one, exhorting his audience to believe that the silver standard was the remedy needed for proper adjustment.

Each program, had a few listeners, and several arguments followed, the different ideas; all coming from Christian pulpits.

It was late in the afternoon when a gospel message came over the air, the essence of which was: Primarily the world needs men who know Jesus. This was the old, old story, but men gathered round to hear, and did not disperse until the messenger's last word had been said.

The writer believes that Christian churches should be sacredly dedicated to worship, and to proclaim the gospel of Him of whom we sing:

"On Christ, the solid rock I stand,
All other ground is sinking sand."

CHURCH OF OUR SAVIOR

(Episcopal)

Second Sunday after Trinity. Church school, 9:30. H. B. Vincent, superintendent.

HOLY TRINITY ENGLISH LUTHERAN

East State St. at Woodland Ave. Rev. George D. Keister, pastor. Second Sunday after Trinity. Sunday school, 9:45 (Genesis 41:46-57. Paul Wilms, supt.)

Advancement in life is a common goal. People want to get along in life. They want to go ahead. They hope for progress. Some have their wish granted. Others stand still and still others go backward. The secret of advancement is not a mysterious something. There is no royal road to learning. Neither is there a special highway to progress. It is the old, much traveled way of persistence and honest, unselfish work. While others grumble and complain, the plodder keeps toiling on and at last wins the goal. The matter of advancement must not be placed alone upon a human basis. The blessing of God is necessary if true progress is attained. Joseph reached the high place in Egypt because he was capable and worked hard, but his efforts were blessed of God.

Morning worship, 11:00. Sermon: "The Great Feast of God."

The abundant provisions of God are known to all. His gracious blessing upon the labors of man and the bountiful gifts of his love are everywhere in evidence. He does feed us upon the riches of this world's goods and satisfies our spiritual hungers. To this feast the invitations of the beneficent Lord are sent out. The sign of welcome is everywhere perceived. It is guests that God wants. The feast of good things has been prepared to be enjoyed. The first invitations were rejected. There was more important business. The second invitations were received, but there still was room and another group were invited. It was a great feast by a mighty Lord. The absent ones were the losers.

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "To grasp the reality and order of being in its Science, you must begin by reckoning God as the divine Principle of all that really is."

All substance, intelligence, wisdom, being, immortality, cause, and effect belong to God. These are His attributes, the eternal manifestations of the infinite divine Principle, Love."

(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, June 4.—Some new challengers for the leaders of the major league batting races turned up this week but they couldn't do any serious damage to the grip the leaders held on their first place honors.

Continue To Lead
Although both dropped a few points, Jimmy Foxx of the Athletics and Paul Waner of the Pirates continued to set the hitting pace. Foxx and Chuck Klein of the Phillies fought it out for the all-around slugging honors.

Foxx lost 31 points through the week which ended yesterday but wound up with a 15 mark while Waner barely stuck to the 400 class as he dropped five points and wound up at 401.
Ernie Lombardi, Cincinnati catcher, picked up enough times at bat to win a regular's rating and took second place first in the National league, 387 while Chick Hafey, his teammate slipped off to 359 and barely held third safe from new assaults of Don Hurst of Philadelphia and Mel Ott of New York, who captured the next two notches at 353 and 356.

Combs Advances
In the American league bill Dickey of the Yankees and his mate, Tony Lazzeri, exchanged places, finishing with marks of 339 and 357 while a Yankee newcomer to the first five, Earl Combs, followed at 355 and Gerald Walker of Detroit had a 345 mark.

Other National league leaders were Stephenson, Chicago, 346; Klein, Philadelphia, 346; Critz, New York, 341; Moore, Chicago, 333 and Whitney, Philadelphia, 328.

The second American league quintet consisted of Fothergill, Chicago, 327; Gehrig, New York, 326; Averill, Cleveland, 324; Levey, St. Louis, 318; and Gehring, Detroit, 317.

Foxx and Klein held similar positions in the slugging circles of their leagues with honors about even. The Athletic slugger had four firsts with 50 runs, 56 runs batted in, 68 hits and 19 home runs. Klein led in three departments with 54 runs, 46 runs batted in and 13 homers.

The other National league "firsts" went to Paul Waner, who had 69 hits and 29 doubles, and Babe Herman of Cincinnati with nine triples. In the American league, Bruce Campbell of St. Louis with 15 two-baggers and Buddy Myer of Washington with eight triples, were leaders.

Smart Athletics
BOULDER, Colo.—Athletic and scholastic proficiency go hand in hand in the case of three University of Colorado students who ranked the upper bracket of academic averages for the winter quarter.
Walter Clarkson, Denver, varsity third baseman, boasts an average of .93. George Newton, Boulder, basketball captain and football half-back, rated an average of .92.2, and Clayton Sam White, Wellington, Colo., also a football and basketball player, had an average of better than .89.

Women's Right to Participate In Sports Is Upheld by Coach

LOS ANGELES, June 4.—"A woman who has athletic ability has as much right to express her talents as if she were an artist, a writer, or a musician."
This is the creed expressed by Mrs. Allen Allen, assistant coach of the United States women's team in track and field for the tenth Olympic games, and a prominent figure in American athletic councils.
Become More Popular
"Women's sports," said Mrs. Allen, "are coming to the fore in this nation, although we must still go a long way to catch up with some of our European competitors."
"When the Olympic games start here July 30, spectators will see women competing in the main stadium right along with the men, although they will of course be in their separate events."
The bright-eyed, slender Mrs. Allen, having an Olympic diving champion in 1920, has campaigned courageously for the development of women's sports in America.
"It's all bosh to say that sports hurt women. They don't in the least. On the contrary, a woman should express herself in athletics if she can."
"The girls that will wear the Olympic shield for the United States this summer are young—many not much more than 18. They have been trained carefully for their events."
Many Advantages
"The advantages of the Olympic training to young American women have been manifold. Those who desire to win honor in international competition must forego smoking and drinking, get plenty of sleep, and eat with care."
"It is only comparatively recent that the participation of women in sports has been emphasized by America. Now we have strong women's athletic clubs springing up in such places as Boston, Newark, N. J., and Chicago, with the South and the Pacific Coast also playing their part."
"Our American Olympic teams will be drawn from every section of the country. We will have formidable competition. I'm sure we can take our share of the glory."

Old Glory on British Links

The international feature of the contest was very much in evidence when the American women's golf team triumphed over the British women in the recent tournament at Wentworth, near London. Above the American flag is shown being used to identify the ball played by Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, who is shown approaching to make her putt.

CALKINS CHICKS UPSET DOPE TO WIN 6-1 BATTLE

Ohio Edison Falls Back to Fourth Place; Penn-zips Trim Legion

The Calkins Chicks climbed out of a five-game slump, played flashy ball and hit hard to gain a dope-upsetting 6-1 triumph over the Ohio Edison in a well played game at Centennial park Friday.

Hit Christen Hard
The Chicks hammered out 10 hits off Lee Christen and took their first victory of the season. The defeat dropped the power tossers from third to fifth place.

Christen set what is believed to be a league record when he struck out four straight men on 12 pitched balls. He had nine strikeouts.

George McFeely pitched good ball all the way and held the opposition hitless and runless until Christen slammed out a line single to center scoring Dean Beck and saving the powermen from a shut-out.

Pennzips On Top
The Brown Pennzips pulled another upset when they defeated the American Legion team, 4-1, in an interesting battle. McNamee held the hard hitting Legionnaires to four hits.

Ben Paschal Ties Record For Hits

(By Associated Press)
CHICAGO, June 4.—Ben Paschal, a former major league outfielder, now with St. Paul of the American association, today was a shareholder in an often equalled, but never bettered league record.

Paschal yesterday walloped Milwaukee pitching for six hits in as many appearances at the plate, and became the seventh player to accomplish the feat. His hitting spree helped the Saints to a 12 to 5 victory.

The pace setters, Minneapolis and Indianapolis, each took beatings, the Millers bowing to Kansas City and Joe Dawson, 5 to 1, and the Indians losing to Toledo by 8 to 7, in 10 innings.

More than 17,000 fans turned out for the opening of Columbus' new $40,000 stadium, and watched the Red Birds wallop Louisville, 11 to 2. Ken Ash gave the Colonels only four hits, and might have had a shutout, but for errors by Otto Bluege and Pat Crawford. The honor of hitting the first home run out of the new park went to De Witt Le Bourveau, who slashed one of Phil Weinert's pitches over the right field fence with two aboard.

Indian Sign
SEATTLE, Wash.—The Seattle Coast league baseball club is beginning to look like the Mission lineup of last year.
The Indians have signed three Mission castoffs. They are Pete Scott, outfielder; Eddie Mulligan, third sacker; and Jimmy Welsh, outfielder.
Welsh returns here after a long absence. The former Boston Brave and New York Giant played for Seattle in 1932-24, and then was sent to the National League.

The bout had been a rough one until the time the two connected head-on sending both to the mat, and Moran, sprawling on top, was declared the winner.

High School Stars Clash In Chicago

(By Associated Press)
CHICAGO, June 4.—Nearly 500 prep school track and field athletes came to Stagg field at the University of Chicago today to run, jump and heave for national championships and to attempt to qualify as Olympic team possibilities.
There was no advance favorite for the national team title, but previous performances of the contestants indicated a day of record-breaking, with the possibility that a few prospects for Uncle Sam's Olympic team might be produced.

Indians Win Two
Cleveland went into a virtual tie for third place with Detroit by beating the Tigers twice, 3 to 1, and 10 to 7. Wes Ferrell won his own game with a homer with one aboard in the opener.
Bob Worthington's timely double in the ninth inning gave the Boston Braves a 6 to 5 verdict over Brooklyn. Hack Wilson blasted his third homer in two days.
Tony Piet, youthful second baseman knocked one of Jackie May's slants out of the park in the eleventh inning to give Pittsburgh a 6 to 5 victory over the Cubs.

HERE IS A REALLY TOUGH PORCH PAINT!

Tough! That's the only word that describes the wearing quality of LOWE BROTHERS PORCH AND DECK PAINT.

Just try it once . . . you'll find that it dries exceptionally hard, and wears well. Hard leather heels won't scuff it and chairs that skid across the floor won't mar it. And the way it stands up under sun, snow, sleet and rain is truly remarkable!

We can supply you with LOWE BROTHERS PORCH AND DECK PAINT in pleasing colors.
